

Announcing his latest release, from the bestselling author of “Bureaucratically Incorrect”...

ABOUT THE BOOK

Studies indicate that human beings may be becoming increasingly more disengaged than ever. The trends are most pronounced in the workplace where workplace engagement scores are flagging, as well as in our communities where citizen engagement benchmarks ~ such as voting patterns ~ show a serious lack of engagement. This little book is both a story of trying to change systems from within while growing front line leadership. It provokes us to go way beyond theory and motivation, to find real “Monday morning” practices and tools to move our engagement scores in a more positive direction.

ABOUT BOB

Bob lives and works out of Calgary, Alberta. After forty-five years of public service, Bob retired in 2014 and is now engaged in his own “leadership through engagement” practice. He is well known across the country as a thought leader, author, and a down-to-earth practitioner of new models for employee and citizen engagement, systems thinking and building leadership at all levels. His innovative style of leadership is based on the concept of entrepreneurial “practice” off the corner of the desk. This exciting approach is predicated on the belief that the real job of leaders is to create more leaders and that leadership can be found in the file rooms as well as the boardrooms.
